Patricia's friends get together, ten days after her death, to open the jar of papers with unfulfilled dreams that she left them. The initial tasks seem simple and positive. Everything becomes complicated when they discover, among the papers, the name of a man who Patricia was planning to murder.

A fatal accident on an illegal party kills Patricia too soon. After her death, her friends receive a mysterious message that tells them to open a jar full of Patricia's dreams and goals. Among the most innocent, there are obscure and violent requests that make them look into themselves, and to her friend, in a very different way. Together, they will grieve, share the anxiety of financial stability, fight for the environment and look for love in dating apps. These five young adults will conquer Lisbon and learn how to live (in this new world).
